We randomly assigned the participants to receive either an 800-microgram daily dose of budesonide (n = 353) or placebo (n = 360) for 12 months. The primary outcome was the development of asthma, as diagnosed by a physician, at 12 months. Eighty-six of 353 participants treated with budesonide and 150 of 360 participants treated with placebo had a physician diagnosis of asthma at 12 months, a relative risk (95 percent confidence interval) of 0.53 (0.39 to 0.72). In a subgroup of children in whom the trial was designed to detect a hazard ratio of 0.6 to 0.8, the between-group difference in risk of asthma at 12 months was 0.45 (0.26 to 0.76), and the study was well powered to detect this size of difference. Adverse events were more common with budesonide. These results show that long-term inhaled budesonide is effective in preventing the occurrence of asthma in a population of children with and without a history of wheeze.The Supreme Court has ruled that employees of the nation's largest nonprofit insurers -- which include Aetna, Humana and Cigna -- should be paid in accordance with their different job titles. The justices unanimously ruled that Aetna, for example, must be paid for its highest-ranking directors based on the compensation received by the entire board. The decision deals a blow to the company. In 2013, the 6d1f23a050
